What should the Bay State's new slogan be?

Weigh in. What are your suggestions for the new slogan? Tweet them to @MetroBoston.

The commonwealth needs a rebranding apparently.

At least, the new state's tourism chief seems to think so.

In comments made to The Boston Globe, Rich Doucette, the executive director of the Massachusetts Office of Travel & Tourism, indicated the current slogan, "It's all here," could be better.

"I think somewhere 'Massachusetts' has to get back into the slogan," said Doucette. "At some point in time, we can make a stronger statement than 'It's all here.'"

All-stars. Larry Bird, Big Papi, Meb Keflezighi on Olympic bid board

The board of directors for the group spearheading Boston's Olympic bid includes Celtics legends Larry Bird and Jojo White, Red Sox slugger David Ortiz and 2014 Boston Marathon winner Meb Keflezighi.

The board for Boston 2024 held its inaugural meeting Wednesday. That group hopes to land the 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Whether Larry Legend and company will be able to change people's minds about the bid remains to be seen. A poll released earlier this month indicates about half of Boston area residents oppose the idea. Critics are concerned about a lack of transparency in the bid, potential cost overruns and minimal economic pay-off from the games.

Boston 2024's board chairman is John Fish, who is the CEO of Suffolk Construction, the state's largest construction firm. The board's vice chairmen include Steve Pagliuca, a managing partner of Bain Capital and co-owner of the Celtics and Roger Crandall, chairman, president and CEO of Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company.

In addition to Bird, White, Ortiz and Keflezighi, the board includes Olympian Michelle Kwan, and Boston Marathon winner and paralympian Cheri Blauwet.

Local civic and philanthropic leaders as well as United States Olympic Committee members, are also serving on the board, which will "provide governance oversight on key policy issues leading up to the final bid," according to a press release.

"We're tapping into a diverse base of support, experience and counsel to develop a winning plan that aligns with the long-term vision of Boston and brings back to the U.S. the spirit and community building power of the Olympic Games," Fish said in a statement.

Tufts students stage sit-in to demand the university divest from fossil fuels

More than 30 students and organizers staged a sit-in at a Tufts University administration building Wednesday morning to demand a meeting with the school's brass about fossil fuel divestment.

Tufts sophomore Shana

Gallagher said the students plan to peacefully occupy Ballou Hall until Tufts commits to divest its endowment from publicly traded, fossil fuel companies over a five-year period.

The sit-in coincided with Earth Day. Recently, students from universities across the country — including Harvard and Yale — have pushed for their schools to divest from fossil fuel companies.

Most of the students were from Tufts Climate Action.

In a statement, that group said, "the climate crisis is an imminent danger to mostly low-income communities and communities of color across the world, and Tufts simply cannot continue to invest in and profit from this destruction."

The group said by investing in fossil fuel companies, the Medford-based university is ignoring climate change and "refusing to live up to its own core values."

Bomb victim: 'I thought I was dead'

In court. Testimony continues in the sentencing phase of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev's terror trial.

When ballroom dancer Adrienne Haslet-Davis heard a blast as she stood at the finish line of the Boston Marathon two years ago, she knew it was no accident and suspected another explosion would follow.

But she had no idea the second bomb was beside her until it went off with a deafening blast and a blinding flash of light.

"I couldn't hear myself scream," Haslet-Davis on Wednesday told the jurors who will determine if convicted bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev is sentenced to death or life in prison.

"I thought that because I couldn't hear myself scream, I was dead."

Federal prosecutors called a series of witnesses who described what they lost when the 21-year-old ethnic Chechen and his brother set off a pair of homemade pressure-cooker bombs at the race's crowded finish line on April 15, 2013.

The bombing killed three people and injured 264, including 17 who lost legs.

Haslet-Davis, 34, was among them.

She broke down in tears while describing a day that she began in platform heels, trying to "look cute" for her husband, and ended on the ground, her left leg soaked with blood.

Her husband, Adam, had applied the first tourniquet to her wounded leg before the two realized that he was also seriously wounded.

When she was separated from him and brought to a hospital where her left leg was amputated, she believed he was dead and that she would also die, she testified.

The Dept. of Justice released this photograph of Tsarnaev flipping his middle finger at a security camera in his prison cell.
DEPT. OF JUSTICE

More testimony

- Lingzi Lu's aunt, Jinyan Zhao, testified that her niece was a "beautiful nerd" who had long wanted to study in the United States.
- "America was her first choice," said Zhao.
- MIT officer Sean Collier had dreamed of wearing a badge since childhood.
- "He was a typical little boy, [he] wanted to be a police officer," said Collier's 27-year-old brother, Andrew. "But he never grew out of it."

Quoted

"I told [my parents] Adam is dead, and this might be it for me."

Haslet-Davis

Adam survived the attack, but has since "bravely checked himself into" a mental hospital, Haslet-Davis testified.

In addition to the three people killed by the bombs, 8-year-old Martin Richard, 23-year-old Chinese graduate student Lingzi Lu and 29-year-old restaurant manager Krystle Campbell, the Tsarnaev brothers shot dead MIT police officer Sean Collier three days later as they prepared to flee the city.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, died hours later after Dzhokhar ran him over with a car at the end of a gunfight with police.

Defense attorneys have opted to delay their opening statements until next week when they begin calling their own slate of witnesses aimed at persuading the jury to spare their client's life.

Their argument is expected to focus on Tamerlan, who they have painted as the mastermind, with Dzhokhar following out of a sense of familial fealty rather than personal conviction.

In anticipation of that argument, lawyers on Wednesday sparred over the significance of surveillance footage in which Tsarnaev raises his middle finger at a camera in a courthouse holding cell while awaiting arraignment in July 2013.

Lawsuit. Mother of ex-NFL star's murder victim to pursue civil lawsuit

The mother of the semi-professional football player murdered by former New England Patriots player Aaron Hernandez said on Wednesday that she would resume her wrongful death civil suit against the ex-NFL star.

In a tearful news conference, Ursula Ward, whose son Odin Lloyd was fatally shot by Hernandez in an industrial park near his North Attleboro home, said she was renewing a legal effort that had been put on hold during Hernandez's trial for the murder of her son.

"I thought my life ended with his," Ward said. "I always wish I was there to take those bullets for Odin."

Last week, Hernandez, 25, was sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole for first-degree murder for Lloyd's slaying.

His conviction cleared the way for the civil suit, which seeks unspecified monetary damages, to proceed.

Hernandez faces a second trial this year in Boston for the fatal double shooting of two men in the South End. REUTERS

France. Algerian man 'planning terror attack on churches' arrested

French Prime Minister Manuel Valls (C) and French Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve (L) arrive at the Sainte Therese de l'Enfant Jesus church in Villejuif, outside Paris, on April 22, 2015. / GETTY IMAGES

An Algerian man suspected of planning an imminent attack on a church has been arrested in Paris, with police discovering Kalashnikovs, hand guns and ammunition in his possession, top officials said on Wednesday.

The 24-year old electronics student, who is also suspected of the murder of a 32-year-old woman, was detained on Sunday after he apparently shot himself by accident and called an ambulance.

France heightened surveillance of potential suspects and deployed troops to patrol sensitive sites after Islamist militants killed 17 people in January in attacks on the offices of the Charlie Hebdo satirical weekly and a Jewish food store.

He said the man had previously come to the attention of the French authorities as possibly wanting to go to Syria. Police had made checks on him in 2014 and 2015 without finding anything that would warrant further investigation.

Paris chief prosecutor Francois Molins said a search of the man's phones and laptops "revealed that he was in touch with another person, who could be in Syria, with whom he was discussing ways to carry out an attack and who had specifically asked him to target a church." REUTERS

Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone are never getting back together...ever

GETTY IMAGES

After dating for three years — so basically, a decade in Hollywood — “The Amazing Spider-Man” stars Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone went on a “break” two weeks ago. But unfortunately this is no Ross and Rachel situation. According to Us magazine, a source close to the couple says they’re done for good. Apparently, Garfield got a little too into character preparing for his role in “Silence.” “He’s been in a dark place for months getting into the role. He wasn’t being the best partner,” a source tells the magazine. Can someone put this guy in a light-hearted rom-com next? Sheesh!

Sandra Bullock is hotter at 50 than you’ll ever be People magazine announced its “World’s Most Beautiful Woman” yesterday: the lovely Sandra Bullock. In classic Bullock form, she laughed off the honor and instead says she’s more honored to be the mother of her 5-year-old son Louis. “Real beauty is quiet. Especially in this town, it’s just so hard not to say, ‘Oh, I need to look like that,’” she tells People. “No, be a good person, be a good mom, do a good job with the lunch, let someone cut in front of you who looks like they’re in a bigger hurry. The people I find most beautiful are the ones who aren’t trying.” We get it. You’re hot and a good person and there is no living up to you.

Amy Schumer pranks Kanye West

In other Kardashian-Jenner news, because there is never a day where they make headlines just once, Kim Kardashian and Kanye West totally got punked by Amy Schumer at the Time 100 Gala this week. She fake tripped in front of the couple on the red carpet and sprawled on the ground, face first. Most people might lend a hand and help a girl up, but the couple just kind of stepped over her and carried on. Well, what else would you expect from Yeezus?

Bruce Jenner wears a dress

New photos appear to show former Olympic athlete Bruce Jenner in a striped dress outside his Malibu home. The New York Daily News published the photos a couple of days prior to Jenner’s scheduled interview with

DAILY NEWS

Diane Sawyer. The interview is believed to be about Jenner’s coming out as transgender. Rumors and speculation have followed Jenner for some time now, with many media groups remarking on the athlete’s dramatic change in appearance. The Daily News reports that Jenner has also been seen wearing a sports bra: “A photo of the former Olympic gold medalist wearing what appeared to be a sports bra while riding his Harley Davidson motorcycle emerged Monday, leading many to assume the star had already undergone breast augmentation surgery.” Jenner’s interview airs Friday.

'Bound'

Netflix Instant

The Wachowskis are in the doghouse, having made three bombs in a row (most recently "Jupiter Ascending"). But they can do whatever they please because of their debut: a neo-noir that got attention not just because its heroines (Jennifer Tilly and Gina Gershon) were lesbians, but because it was an immaculately sculpted nail-biter.

Horror

'The Babadook'

Netflix Instant

We are suddenly amidst an indie horror renaissance, where skilled and tiny scarefests, most notably "It Follows," actually cross over into the mainstream. Jennifer Kent's Australian ghost movie is equally intense. In fact, it's debatably more nerve-wracking before a mega-creepy specter starts skulking about the home of a widow (Essie Davis) and her young son (Noah Wiseman). That's because the boy has become abruptly unhinged, prone to loud, uncontrollable freak-out sessions, much to the dismay of his grieving and already on-edge mom.

Documentary

'Winnebago Man'

Netflix Instant

What's fascinating about this doc, in which an enterprising filmmaker tracks down a guy who became Internet-famous for an old video where he flips out while shooting a commercial, isn't the guy himself. It's watching director Ben Steinbauer realize he's in over his head. Not only does his subject prove irascible, but he's suddenly stuck with an ethical dilemma on how to handle someone who never wanted fame. MATT PRIGGE

THINGS ARE GETTING BETTER — IN 'STAR WARS'

Quoted

the opening ceremonies for Star Wars Celebration. She was asked which "Star Wars" character she would be, and she replied, "I don't have many choices. But that's going to change. ... Going forward with all we're talking about, there are going to be a lot of wonderful new [female] characters," going on to mention her daughters and how important this is.

I knew it was coming. The cast has been out there for months. However, hearing the female president of Lucasfilm saying this on stage in front of thousands of people, and even more watching the live broadcast around the world, made me feel like all the hard work — blogs, websites, Twitter posts, books, fan films, etc. — of female "Star Wars" fans have made an impact. Someone is listening, and it means more to me than I can say.

May the Force be with you.

GEEK GIRL
metro@metro.us

As you all know, the new trailer for "Star Wars VII: The Force Awakens" was released last weekend. As someone who grew up as a "Star Wars" fan, has a website named after a main character and carries a Boba Fett helmet and a lightsaber in her trunk (hey, it's best to be prepared), I was pretty psyched. And by "psyched," I mean there was undignified, ugly-crying when I watched it.

There was just nothing like "Star Wars" when I was a kid. There were certainly very few female characters like Princess Leia. She was bold, she didn't take orders, she could shoot far better than any Stormtrooper, and she was a galactic senator! The only issue I had was that there was only one of her. I actually remember asking a friend if no one had moms in the "Star Wars" universe when I was little.

When the first cast list for the new film came out, there was only one new woman (Daisy Ridley) on it, and seven new men. It's the reason I started Legion of Leia. So you can imagine the joy I've felt as woman after woman was added to the roster.

Guys might not think about it that much, but as I've said in many an article, representation does matter. I certainly didn't realize exactly how much it would mean to me, personally, when Lucasfilm President Kathleen Kennedy spoke at

Interview. What made former 'Gossip Girl' Blake Lively change her mind and come back to acting

"Age of Adaline" director Lee Toland Krieger claims that Blake Lively came in insisting she was the best person for the title role, but Lively herself begs to differ. "I didn't say I'm the best person for it, I just said that I really wanted it," she explains. "I could give you a whole list of people that would've been better for it. But I was the most aggressive, I'll tell you that much."

It makes sense that Lively would approach the role with such vigor, considering she had to cancel the hiatus from acting she'd put herself on following the end of "Gossip Girl" in 2012. "I was on a TV show for six years. We shot 10 months a year," Lively explains. "I was just exhausted, and I didn't feel good at it anymore. When you have to do something so much, it's just muscle memory, and I wanted to take a break. I started my company, Preserve, because I thought, what else do I love? What else do I feel good at? What else can I be creative at while taking a break from acting?"

But she didn't block out Hollywood completely, with scripts still coming in. "I read 'Adaline' and thought, I can't not do this movie. I still wanted to be on a break, but I just thought I have to, have to be in this film," Lively remembers. "And then because it was such a special movie

Blake Lively (with Michael Huisman) plays a woman who hasn't aged in 80 years in "The Age of Adaline." / DEYAH PERA

One more thing

The future

And don't worry, she did find another script that measured up to "Age of Adaline," as she already has her next starring role carved out: "I'm doing a movie called 'All I See is You,' with Marc Forster directing and Jason Clarke," she says. "It's about a woman who loses her eyesight at a young age and then has an experimental surgery and gets her eyesight back, and how it effects their beautiful relationship and their marriage, which was so healthy when she was codependent, but now that she's not ... It's a very character-driven story." That should make for some interesting research as well.

and such a special experience, I was reading other scripts and thought, how do I live up to that? And then I got pregnant, so I didn't have to."

It's a good thing she got over those feelings of inadequacy, too, because the role of Adaline — a woman born in 1906 who stops aging at age 29 — proved to be full of challenges.

"I always look for the closest thing to a character that I'm playing, and I try to meet that person and talk to that person. It's very hard to meet someone who's been alive for 100 years, and it's even harder to meet someone who's immortal," Lively admits. "So I thought, OK, when is a woman most defined by? When does she really blossom into who she is? And it's when they come of age. So if she came of age in the 1920s, I need to capture a woman from the 1920s who has that formality and who is stoic and very proper and very reserved and conservative, and then try to weave in some influence from the '60s. That's very, very different from where women came in the Edwardian era. She can't be alien, so she has to have this timelessness to her and she has to look like a mixture of all these decades, because she wouldn't just go shopping at Zara and speak like I speak."

James Bay: Music's new sensitive Brit

"YouTube is just as good as Myspace for the time Myspace existed. If you have a good song, people will hear it and recognize it eventually," Bay tells us. PROVIDED / MWN

The singer-songwriter talks about feeling the pressure to become the next Sam Smith and becoming an accidental sex symbol.

RICHARD PECKETT
richard.peckett@metro.lu

James Bay, the fedora-wearing troubadour with enviable cheekbones, won Critics' Choice at the 2015 Brit Awards; an accolade previously bestowed on Sam Smith, Jessie J and Adele. His debut album "Chaos and the Calm," which dropped in March, went straight to No. 1 in the U.K. and he's now soulfully seducing the world on a sell-out tour. If you need any other assurances of success, the Brit is Taylor Swift-endorsed, too. We chat with him about how he's taking it all in.

You're a Critics' Choice winner, just like Sam Smith. Do you feel any pressure to emulate his success?

If I can achieve half the amount of what Sam Smith has achieved, I would be over the moon. I'm very much having my moment and I'm going to make it last as long as I can. I'm trying to do this all as James Bay and not be the next anything, without meaning to sound like a big diva d-bag by saying my own name in the third person, which I just did.

Why is there such a thirst for male singer-songwriters?

People want to hear a genuine chorus and lyric — something gimmick-free. In pop music there are styles and genres that suit, for want of a better term, more gimmicky approaches. The thing that I'm trying to do, along with George Ezra and Hozier, is just move people and make people feel something.

You're becoming a bit of a sex symbol.

The first thing that ever came about attached to my name was my music and that's still the reason I'm here. I do gigs where I sing songs and play guitar and I feel like that's the main reason that people buy the tickets, and I feel pretty confident in that.

Have you had any marriage proposals over Twitter?

There's been some. I'd be lying if I told you there wasn't any but I've got nothing to do with them. Twitter's a big wide ocean of stuff.

Singer-songwriter Nick Hakim, a native of Washington, D.C., traffics in a love-haunted, lachrymose soul sound, usually awash in reverb, sparse but spacious, driven by the quiet passion of his vocals. It feels like perfect music for some lonely nighttime drive in a mood caught between remorse and nostalgia, and all those other paradoxes of being a vulnerable human.

Vermont's best-known export is maple syrup, of course, followed by Ben and Jerry's ice cream and jam bands. Twiddle is one such band — four ace musicians performing a signature feel-good mix of jazz fusion, Americana, funk, prog rock and reggae. Jam is a love-hate genre for many, but for those on the love side, Twiddle's definitely the real deal. MATTHEW DINARO

Journalist Nathan Gorenstein will discuss his new book, "Tommy Gun Winter," about the Millen brothers, sons of a Jewish contractor who performed several bank robberies in 1930s Boston with the help of an unlikely gang. It sounds like a setup for a comedy, but the story ends in murder. Largely forgotten today, it was major media sensation at the time.

Back Pocket Dancers are an intergenerational dance troupe with members ranging in age from 25 to 92 — rare for dance, in which youthful performers tend to be favored and older dancers tend to work behind the scenes as instructors or choreographers. They'll perform several pieces celebrating both the youth and experience of members, including a set of stories in many languages.

Blue

Serene mountain drives in Virginia

Running from northwest Virginia to the Smoky Mountains, Skyline Drive and the Blue Ridge Parkway offer a relaxing escape from the congestion of East Coast cities.

The trip starts in Front Royal, Virginia, just 75 miles from Washington. The pretty town is at the entrance to the Shenandoah National Park and Skyline Drive, so it is always busy with hikers, backpackers, mountain bikers and motor tourists.

The town boasts that it is the Canoe Capital of Virginia. Located where two rivers connect to form the main stem of the Shenandoah River, it's a destination for paddlers and tubers. The conditions range from gentle float trips to intermediate white water. Several outfitters offer equipment rental, guided tours and lodging packages. For more information, visit www.discoverfrontroyal.com.

Skyline Drive ambles through the wilderness of Shenandoah National Park (www.nps.gov/shen). The speed limit on the 105-mile, two-lane road is 35mph, perfect for relaxing and enjoying the view. There are 75 scenic overlooks, plus waterfalls and easy walks just off the road. For hikers and backpackers, the park has over 500 miles of trails. Ranger stations have maps and other vital information for drivers and hikers. They also offer guided hikes and animal encounter programs.

Local inhabitants,

Appalachian

including whitetail deer, black bear, wild turkey and red fox, roam freely, so keep your camera ready. Rather than drive the route in one day, stay overnight at one of the lodges or cabins in the park. Visit www.goshenandoah.com for information on lodgings.

The Blue Ridge Parkway (www.nps.gov/blri) connects seamlessly with Skyline Drive near Waynesboro. I-64 connects here if you need to loop back east. You'll find historic and cultural spots sharing the scenic views along this road. Plan to stop at Peaks of Otter, which was "the" mountain resort in the mid-1800s, and Mabry Mill, which demonstrates how resourceful, creative and just plain tough mountain settlers were.

Touring Halifax, Nova Scotia

This year, Cunard Cruise Lines celebrates its 175th anniversary, and this is just one of many excellent reasons to visit Halifax, Nova Scotia, the birthplace and home of founder Samuel Cunard.

The major commercial hub of Canada's Atlantic Provinces, Halifax has great shopping, dining and nightlife, but its long seafaring history continues to underpin the city's enormous appeal: The remains of a vast hilltop fortress still keep watch over the bay; cruise ships and occasionally tall ships still frequent the harbor; and a salty tang still pervades the air.

The Cunard connection

Samuel Cunard, born in 1787, founded what is still a major cruise line. Its very name evokes the golden age of trans-Atlantic crossings, when the iconic, original Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary were the way to travel. As part of the anniversary celebrations, the Queen Mary 2 will be sailing into Halifax on July 10.

In 1912, one of Cunard's ships, the Carpathia, rescued survivors of the Titanic disaster (many of those who perished are buried in Halifax's Fairview Lawn Cemetery). The Maritime Museum of the Atlantic (www.maritimemuseum.novascotia.ca) tells this and other stories.

Welcome to Canada

Between 1928 and 1971 more than a million people — refugees, war brides, seekers of a better life — passed through the Pier 21 immigration shed, now home to the Canadian Museum of Immigration at Pier 21 (www.pier21.ca). Reopening in May 2015 after a major expansion, it provides insight into the contributions those people made to the nation's culture, economy and way of life.

Breathe the sea air

The waterfront is lined by historic buildings housing interesting little shops, art and craft galleries, a great farmers market and some of the city's best restaurants and bars, many with patios overlooking the water. Festivals, events and street entertainers keep it buzzing spring through fall, and scenic boat trips (including North America's longest-running salt-water ferry) bring the maritime experience to life.

Letters to the editor

Workers do deserve pay

Re: 'If fast food workers want more money, they should earn it' (Metro, April 22) Jennifer M. Clark's letter to the editor is a re-statement of the same idea that has been spouted non-stop by a large number of people. But the problem is, they are just flat-out wrong in every way imaginable. People deserve the pay they can force their employer to pay, no employer pays well because they are nice — so if fast food workers want to cost their employers' money until it is cheaper to pay them a 2015 wage than try to keep them at 1970's wage levels, that is called capitalism. Wages SHOULD have gone up along with inflation, as prices did, but this did NOT happen. And while it would be nice, according to some, to restore slavery by means of wages a century or more out-of-date, it is actually a terrible idea in an economic view. I won't get into moral or social justice points of view since it would be like Latin to the people who are pro-poverty.

Another point on the pay deserved: Do professional football players really deserve millions of dollars for playing a game? Do movie stars deserve millions for playing pretend? Of course not; they get it not because they deserve it or their skills are so uncommon that it is a necessity, but because they held the employers over a barrel until their demands were met. D. BROWN, VIA EMAIL

SuperMax for Tsarnaev

Though many people would like to see Tsarnaev executed, death is too good for him. It's too quick. He needs to suffer to some degree like the people he was responsible for killing and maiming. Since he clearly has no conscience, 23-hours-a-day solitary confinement at ADX in Colorado sounds ideal. It will give him more than enough time to reflect. He will eventually be reunited with his murderous brother, which he wants. Hopefully, it will be later than sooner. PAT MCKENZIE

LeBron James has been through many playoff wars at TD Garden. / GETTY IMAGES

LeBron no longer the immature guy with Celtics issues

NBA. LeBron James returns to TD Garden to face the C's tonight owning a strong playoff résumé.

Even entering this series, there was a train of thought amongst Celtics fans that LeBron James was still Peyton Manning in sneakers and shorts. The 30 points that James dropped on the Celtics in Game 2 Tuesday night, half of which came in the fourth quarter, should more or less end the speculation that No. 23 sees the color green in his sleep.

Dating back to Game 6 of the 2012 Eastern Conference Finals between James' Heat and the KG-Pierce-Allen Celtics, it's been the Celtics and their fans who have had to begrudgingly admit that the guy is pretty damn good. That was the game it all changed for James in terms of "clutchness" as he torched the Celtics for 45 points in a do-or-die game. He and the Heat won that series in seven, before beating Oklahoma City in the NBA Finals in five.

His flip-flopping and often "fake" attitude toward matters related toward basketball and life in general will never make him a fan favorite in Boston. Truth be told, most Boston fans would respect Kobe Bryant for being a straight-up jerk ahead of respecting LeBron for being phony good guy. But there is absolutely no doubting anymore that James can single-handedly win a basketball game just about whenever he pleases these days.

Bad breaks

The Celtics have struggled greatly coming out of halftime in the first two games of this series.

- The C's scored just 22 points in the third quarter of Game 1, their lowest quarter total of that game.
- In Game 2, matters were even worse for Boston coming out of halftime as they put up just 18 points.
- The Cavs scored consistently per quarter in Game 2, scoring 25, 26, 24 and 24 points each quarter, respectively.

The scary part for the Celtics and every other franchise in the NBA is that a now grown-up James seems to have found a younger Dwyane Wade-like Robin to his Batman back in Cleveland. Kyrie Irving, who already has 56 points total in his first NBA playoff series, certainly has an edge to him. And he's learning all sorts of playoff tricks from the battle-tested James.

"He's a student of the game, but he's been through far more experiences than I have," Irving told Cleveland.com. "There was one time, I forget who we were playing, we were still on the court, he was running pick-and-roll, I think, five times in a row and we scored, I think, five times in a row and he came to me and gave me advice and told me what he saw out there and what I should be seeing as well. Just the overall game and how to control it. Constantly teaching. You want to take advice from someone who has done it before and been successful with it."

James seems to be relishing the role of teacher, offering a Irving a chance to learn from a future first-ballot Hall of Famer. It's something James himself never had early in his career. Maybe it could have helped him in those struggles against the Celtics once upon a time.

"I make it tougher on him because he can handle it," James told Cleveland.com of Irving. "He has the potential to be great if he's not there already. A lot of room for improvement and I am going to continue to be tougher on him than anyone on this team."

James and Irving will look to extend their lead over the Celtics tonight in Game 3 at TD Garden (7 p.m., CSNNE).

MLB. Buchholz takes ball for Sox against the Rays

Clay Buchholz will be back on the mound for the Red Sox tonight (7 p.m., NESN) when they conclude their series against the Rays in St. Petersburg, Florida. Buchholz is 1-2 this season with a 6.06 ERA but was solid in his last start against Baltimore. Despite a 4-1 Sox loss, Buchholz allowed just two earned runs on the day, striking out seven while throwing a season-high 102 pitches. It was a nice rebound from his brutal start at Yankee Stadium the week prior.

Jake Odorizzi will start for the Rays, Odorizzi is 2-1 this year with a 1.74 ERA.

The Sox begin a three-game series at Baltimore beginning Friday night. With an AL East-best 9-5 record heading into play Wednesday night, it's worth noting that Boston has won all five series openers so far this season.
